

Studia Celto-Slavica Open Access Policy

Terms and definitions

We use the following terms and definitions:

Preprint: An early version of an article prior to the version submitted for publication in a journal.

SMUR (Submitted Manuscript Under Review): The version of the article that is under formal review for inclusion in the journal.

AM (Accepted Manuscript): The version of the article that has been accepted for publication. This version may include revisions resulting from peer review but may be subject to further modification by University of Western Brittany CRBC that act as publishers for Studia Celto-Slavica (for example, copy-editing and typesetting).

VoR (Version of Record): The version that is formally published. This includes any article that is formally identified as being published online before the compilation of a journal issue.

Personal webpage: Web pages created by you, about you and your research which are hosted on a non-commercial website (such as your institute’s website). Personal profile pages in commercial sharing sites (such as ResearchGate, Academia.edu and Facebook) are not considered to be personal web pages.

Department or institutional repository: Web pages hosted by an academic or research institute or department to provide access to the work to promote and the activities of the institute or department, at all times operating for a non-commercial purpose.

Subject repository: Web pages hosted by an organization to provide access to the work from researchers working in a subject or range of subjects, at all times operating for a non-commercial purpose.

Commercial and non-commercial: Commercial means any activity for direct or indirect financial gain.

Creative Commons and other end-user licenses

Preprints and SMURs can be made publicly accessible under any license terms the authors choose. We recommend a Creative Commons CC-BY or a more restrictive CC license.

Accepted Manuscripts can be made accessible under a Creative Commons CC-BY license or equivalent, but not a more permissive license. For volumes 1–12, the VoR on the Studia Celto-Slavica website may not be redistributed or reused without permission; VoRs from subsequent volumes are made available under a Creative Commons CC-BY license.

Third-party material

Before posting articles online, authors should ensure they have the appropriate permission to include any third-party content. When posting articles under a Creative Commons license, the permission should allow the third-party material to be included either (i) under the Creative Commons license or (ii) clearly indicated as being protected by third party copyright, with a clear notice that it cannot be reused without further permissions clearance from the identified third-party rights holder.

Closed deposits and embargo periods

Articles can be deposited in repositories before publication provided the content is only accessible to repository administration staff. This is sometimes referred to as ‘closed deposit’. Metadata about the article (for example the article title, abstract, and journal citation) can be made public as soon as the article is published.

The full text must not be made public before the embargo ends.

The applicable embargo period starts from the date the Version of Record is first published online, whether as part of a journal’s issue or as a First View article prior to the compilation of the journal issue in print.

Posting content in repositories

We require repositories to include:

- If an article has not yet been published, a clear statement that the material has been accepted for publication in a revised form, with a link to the Studia Celto-Slavica website.
- For all published articles, a link to the article’s Version of Record at the Studia Celto-Slavica website – via a DOI-based link.
- A clear statement about the license terms under which the posted version of the article is deposited.

Example statements are:

- This article has been published in a revised form in Studia Celto-Slavica [http://doi.org/XXX]. This version is free to view and download for private research and study only. Not for re-distribution or re-use. © copyright holder.
- This article has been published in a revised form in Studia Celto-Slavica [http://doi.org/XXX]. This version is published under a Creative Commons CC-BY license. © copyright holder.

Citing content in repositories

When citing an Accepted Manuscript or an earlier version of an article, we request that readers also cite the Version of Record with a DOI link, for example: Subsequently published in revised form in Studia Celto-Slavica [http://doi.org/XXX].

The Institutional Archiving Agreement

Our standard Green OA policy is compliant with an industry initiative, the Institutional Archiving Agreement. The IAA supports sustainable Green Open Access alongside a commitment for publishers to provide metadata and other services to allow authors and organizations to more easily comply with Green OA policies.
